(b) The reasons for decline in foreign tourist traffic to India during the years 2001 and 2002, are the September 11 incident in the USA, war in Afghanistan, terrorist attack on the Indian Parliament, tension on the Indo-Pak border and the travel advisories issued by a number of foreign Governments. However, the tourist traffic to India has increased during the years 2003 and 2004 despite a recession of about 1 % in the tourist traffic around the world during the year 2003.

(c) and (d) India is a long haul destination and 83% of the tourist traffic arrives by air. This makes India a more expensive destination. In order to make India a competitive destination, from time to time the Ministry takes up with the concerned Central and State agencies for liberalization of air access, rationalization of taxes, reduction in the multiplicity and rates of taxes, etc. on accommodation, transport and on other facilities being used by the tourists.
